DETAILED ACTION

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 102

1. The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless -

(e) the invention was described in (1) an application for patent, published under section 122(b), by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent or (2) a patent granted on an application for patent by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent, except that an international application filed under the treaty defined in section 351(a) shall have the effects for purposes of this subsection of an application filed in the United States only if the international application designated the United States and was published under Article 21(2) of such treaty in the English language.

2. Claims 1-18 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(e) as being anticipated by Yoshikawa et al (US Patent No. 6,504,639).

Yoshikawa et al discloses an optical scanning apparatus comprising:

a light deflector (5) having at least one deflection surface to deflect a light beam emitted from the light source;

a target surface (8);

an image forming optical system (7) to form an image on the target surface with the light beam deflected by the light deflector; and a mirror member having different refractivities in a main scan direction and a sub scan direction so that the mirror member reflects the light beam emitted from the light source to form a linear image on the deflection Surface which is relatively long in the main scan direction (see columns 1-2). The mirror member convergently reflects the light beam emitted from the light source and incident thereon in the sub scan direction (by 2 and 3). The mirror member is a cylindrical mirror having a plane in the main scan direction and a spherical or an aspherical surface in the sub scan direction (see shape of 7). An angle of the light beam emitted from the light source and incident on the deflection surface of the light deflector is changed in the main scan direction using the mirror member (see the shape of mirror). The light beam is divergently emitted from the light source and the apparatus further comprises a lens (2 or 3) between the light source and the mirror member (see Fig. 1).

Art Unit: 2872

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

3. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negatived by the manner in which the invention was made.

Art Unit: 2872

4. Claims 19 and 20 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Yoshikawa et al.

Yoshikawa et al discloses the claimed invention as set forth above except that the incident angle of the reflected light beam entering the deflector is approximately 60 or 90 degrees. It would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art to set the degrees of the angle, since it has been held that where the general conditions of a claim are disclosed in the prior art, discovering the optimum or workable ranges involves only routine skill in the art. In re Aller, 105 USPQ 233.
